AWC Berhad

Environmentally sound

- AWC met 27 fund managers during our 2016 Public Sector Day.
- Management was bullish on STREAM's prospects in India and the Middle East, and Singapore's HDB market.
- Rainwater harvesting is a small but fast-growing business for AWC.
- The stock remains under-owned at an only 2% institutional shareholding.
- Maintain Add. AWC remains one of our top small-cap picks.

Public Sector Day 2016

AWC met with 27 fund managers during our 2016 Public Sector Day. The company was represented by Chief Financial Officer, Randy Chitty, and the Managing Director of the Facilities Division, Nik Adnan. There were no major surprises at the meetings, with the management introducing the three business divisions in the group – namely, Facilities, Environment (STREAM), and Engineering (Plumbing, Rainwater Harvesting).

New markets

Management was bullish on prospects in India, where AWC recently won a contract in the Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor. It also hopes that future SATS expansion around the world will see AWC winning more STREAM contracts for inflight catering facilities. STREAM's new patented technology will also introduce a new system that will create significant power savings. In Singapore, Terminal 5 (T5) could also be a potential contract in the long term; STREAM was installed in T3 and is being installed in T4.

Captive markets for STREAM

In Abu Dhabi's Al-Raha beach project, there is an estimated RM150m in new contracts to be won over the next 10 years. This is a captive market as new buildings in the area are required to install STREAM. In Singapore, all new HDB developments are required to install vacuum waste management systems. STREAM and Envac (its top competitor) together hold an 80% market share in Singapore. These potential contracts are not reflected in our forecasts.

Niche and non-competitive markets

AWC continues to be the dominant player for STREAM in Malaysia, with an over-90% market share. Since, 2011, six states (Perak, Selangor, Johor, Melaka, Kelantan and Perlis) have mandated rainwater harvesting in building plans for commercial and industrial buildings with roof area exceeding 100 sq.m. According to management, there are limited suppliers and distributors in this industry. In Malaysia, DDT provides a one-stop shop solution for rainwater harvesting that includes design, supply and installation.

AWC remains one of our top small-cap picks

AWC is still under-owned at only 2% institutional shareholding, according to management. The stock is trading at FY17F P/E of 9.7x (ex-cash P/E of 6.9x). Recent acquisition multiples of privately-held facilities management companies by its larger-cap peer UEM Edgenta were 10.1x and 13.2x (for KFM and UEMS, respectively). Our SOP-based target price for AWC values its business at only 11.2x CY17F EPS. We maintain our EPS forecasts, target price and Add rating.

Risks

Downside risks to our target price include the loss of key personnel (e.g. the founders of QDT and STREAM), and project execution/delay risks.
